About Queenstown.

Queenstown is a large town characterised by the striking ruggedness of Tasmania's famous West Coast landscape. The town accesses Tasmania's World Heritage Wilderness Area, and is surrounded by spectacular scenery, including lakes, hills, mountains and ancient pine forests. The community is friendly and loyal to their hometown and its history, and there is a growing creative culture fuelled by local artists and craftspeople. History buffs and explorers will be fascinated by the underground mine tour, the heritage walking tour and the local history museum, and nature lovers will be spoilt for choice with plenty of scenic walking tracks, waterfalls, lakes and lookouts in the surrounding wilderness.

One of Queenstown's biggest attractions is the West Coast Wilderness Railway, which is a must for anyone visiting the area. The steam train has exclusive access to some of the most breath-taking views of the West Coast, as the railway winds its way through remote areas, passengers of the especially luxurious Wilderness Carriage will find their journey fully catered, with Tasmanian sparkling wines!

About Rosebery.

Rosebery is a small mining town located on the northern end of the West Coast Range, nestled in a secluded valley beneath the imposing Mount Black, amidst dense and beautiful Tasmanian forest land. Visitors in Rosebery can view the local mining history in the old aerial bucket ropeway that hangs over the outskirts of town, and in the Rosebery Heritage Centre.

The town is an ideal location for anyone who enjoys bushwalking and hiking, as it accesses several nearby mountains – such as Mount Read, Mount Murchison, and Mount Farrell – all of which offer gorgeous views of the west coast region. Montezuma Falls, are a popular attraction in the area; 5km south of the town, the falls pour spectacularly over a 104m rock face, making them one of Tasmania's highest waterfalls. The falls are accessed via a easy walk (approximately 3 hours return) through Tasmania's characteristic ferns and native foliage, which accommodates many varieties of native birds. There's good fishing at the nearby Lake Pieman and Lake Rosebery, where locals and visitors can catch trout, as well as camp and picnic on the shore.

Aside from its plentiful environmental attractions, Rosebery also has a selection of shops, cafes, and pubs, a swimming pool, and golf course (Australia's steepest course, in fact!) – and best of all, a warm and welcoming community.

About Strahan.

Strahan is a small but popular town on Tasmania's west coast, well known for its stunning scenery and tranquil atmosphere. Located on the northern edge of the vast Macquarie Harbour, it was originally a busy port, but is today a well-loved destination for Tasmanians and tourists alike.

Visitors come to Strahan to experience the untamed wilderness of the west coast, and the town forms a base for hikers, boats, planes, and helicopters looking to explore the breathtaking landscape. It is also a key stopping place for the West Coast Wilderness Railway, which is a hugely popular tourist experience. This scenic railway provides the ideal opportunity for tourists to immerse themselves in the raw, rugged beauty of Tasmania's west coast region, and take in spectacular vistas that are otherwise inaccessible.

Peoples Park and Hogarth Falls are perfect destinations for visitors looking to picnic in and wander through the beautiful west coast landscape with its cool-climate forests and gardens, and its plentiful native wildlife – lucky visitors may even spot a local platypus! In the town centre, there are many historic buildings, artisan shops selling locally made wares, and fresh local produce is served up in cosy restaurants and cafes.

Strahan has a grim but fascinating history, which is displayed at the Strahan Wharf Centre; the centre presents information about the indigenous population, the British pioneers, and the penal history of the region, providing guests with an understanding of the unique personality of this isolated, quiet little town.

About Zeehan.

Zeehan is a rural town in Tasmania's west coast region with a rich, fascinating history demonstrated by the charming Victorian and art deco architecture along its main street.

History enthusiasts will love Zeehan, as one of the key attractions of the town is the popular West Coast Heritage Centre, which is a complex comprised of historic buildings and collections. The centre exhibits the indigenous, pioneering, industrial and mining history of the whole west coast region, as well as fascinating collections of minerals demonstrating the unique geological structure of the area.

Two historic buildings of particular interest are the Gaiety Theatre and the Grand Hotel; these buildings are adjoined, and in the early 20th century attracted patrons from all over Australia, who came to see films, plays, vaudeville reviews and musical concerts. Today the theatre often screens silent films, providing an immersive, old-timey experience for visitors. Mount Zeehan is also a popular attraction; there is a 3-hour return walking track which climbs to the mountain's peak, where hikers can take in the stunning views of the west coast.
